Strengthen individual competences

Change competence – Develop the ability to cope with transformation and change

Transformative processes and changes are not only taking place with ever-increasing dynamism, they also affect all levels of society, organisations, teams, employees and, ultimately, the individual.

The ability to deal competently with change, adapt goals and actions, act creatively and let go of habits is increasingly required by employers. This workshop prepares you for these requirements as a first step.

Develop your own skills profile

Part I: Discovering skills – Your current skills kit for studying and working

Would you like to find out what skills you personally bring to your studies and which of them will help you to be successful now and later in your career? Would you like to know what skills you need to be competent in your studies?

In the workshop and first part towards your skills profile, we will take a look at your current skills kit and the skills you have already evolved from your life and experiences. At the same time, we will look at which skills are required of you in your everyday life and field of study.

Part II: Developing skills – Expanding your skills kit with a view to the future & career

Would you like more clarity about the skills you may have developed 'between the lines' during your studies? Do you want to take a look into the future and know what skills are expected here? Are you interested in a practical assessment of which skills lead to success in specific professions?

Let's continue with the second part of our workshop series on your individual skills profile. By now you may have already gained some experience during your studies at university. Now it's time to become aware of the skills you've developed for your career entry and add them to your skills kit.
